Items of Interest from the Harbor Town.

Fred Hoffman has concluded his duties with J. C. Catts and taken employment at the Goodwin Farm on Gerrish Island.

The three masted schooner William H. Hudson which arrived in the lower harbor from Liverpool, N. S., on Tuesday with lumber for the Mill, with company of Portsmouth, has been since October 15 in making the passage. While this is hardly to be called steamboat speed, it is probably somewhat faster than a natural drift.

Mrs. and Mrs. Lewis Weeks are enjoying Mrs. George E. Ribes of Madison, Mass.

The Grand Lark White Club, reorganized under the name of the Jolly Twines, held its first meeting of the season on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Emma Anne, Prizes were awarded as follows:

First Mrs. Victor Anne.
Second Mrs. Percy Today.
Third Mrs. Henry Blake.

The next meeting will be held on November 18th at the home of Mrs. Henry Blake.

Schooner Chible Harold, Shiloe, N. S., for Baltimore.

Cushman Phillips has concluded his duties in Portsmouth.

Mrs. William A. Godfrey died at the Portsmouth Hospital on Wednesday morning, following a long illness.

Robert Blake has concluded his duties on the Portsmouth Electric R. R.

James H. Walker has bought up his motor boat for the season.

With the exception of one trip to Norfolk in the middle of the summer, the big five masted schooner Dorothy Palmer has laid at anchor in the lower harbor since April 29, while three other five masted ships, the Helen, the John and the Robert, have been in the harbor since the summer.

The Dorothy Palmer, which was the only one of these five masted ships to leave the harbor, has been in the harbor since April 29, while three other five masted ships, the Helen, the John and the Robert, have been in the harbor since the summer.

New System of Deciding Winner in Six Day Bicycle Race is Proposed

New York, Nov. 12. There is a possibility that the six day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden the week of Nov. 16 may be decided in a new way. In the past it has been the custom for the men to race for first place to sprint for one mile at the finish of the four days. Their placing at the finish of this mile has been their placing for the whole race, and the money was divided accordingly. Over in Europe this method has not been followed, but instead a point scoring system was used for the last hour of the race, making it necessary for the contestants to sprint for practically the whole of the last hour. Four of the French riders are much in favor of the European system. In fact, with Sere as their spokesman, they claimed that unless Manager MacPherson agreed to their demands they would refuse to race. He stated that the European method which gave victory to the team scoring the most points in the final hour of the race really decided which was the best team, whereas in the American system all depended on the best sprinter. With such crack sprinters in the race as Gaudet, Clark, Grenda, Walhour, Cavasch and other Europeans and Australians the Frenchmen believe they would not have a chance in the one mile sprint finish, whereas they might be well up front in the hour finish. Among the entries are Alfred Goulet and Alfred Grenda, a team that is considered favorably by the critics, Joe Fogler and Bill and John and Menus Bedell.

BAD COLD? TAKE CASCARETS FOR BOWELS TONIGHT

No headache, constipation, bad cold or sour stomach by morning.

Get a 10-cent box. Sick headache, indigestion, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret (tonight) will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a ten cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver regular for months.

SUPERVISION OF SCHOOLS TO COME BEFORE LEGISLATURE

One of the important, perhaps the most important, question that the next session of the New Hampshire legislature will be called upon to act is a revision of the law relating to the supervision and superintendence of schools.

There is probably no person better qualified to speak of the advantages or disadvantages of the present system than Henry C. Morrison, state superintendent of public instruction of Concord, and while he is slow to condemn the present order of things he is equally quick to agree that it might be and should be vastly improved upon.

The present law regarding the superintendence of schools was drafted and passed by the legislature of 1899. At that time it was deemed a comprehensive measure and in view of the administration of school affairs preceding it, and the unknown quantity of the action and attitude of individual towns and districts with regard to the school problem, was the best that could be devised. Experience of a decade and a half has taught, however, that the law of 1899 can and should be improved upon. Realizing this the principal educators of the state are unanimously enlisted for a change from the existing order of things.

The law of 1899 provides that two or more towns may unite on a superintendent of schools provided he hold a certificate from the state superintendent of public instruction. One-half of his salary, whatever it may be fixed, is to be paid by the state and the other half by the towns or districts receiving the benefit of his superintendence.

It is pointed out by Mr. Morrison that this arrangement is all right and good as far as it goes, but that it does not go far enough in that it is left optional with towns whether they shall unite with other places in having a superintendent or not. The result is that under this supervision, or system of supervision, only about 77 per cent or, substantially, four-fifths of the schools of the state have a superintendent at all. In the strictly rural towns this proportion is cut down to the surprising proportion of only 30 per cent.

Politics is Blamed

This is due, according to the persons who have made an interested study of the subject, mainly to the fact that in many towns the balance of political power is held by persons not especially interested in the schools owing to their having no children of their own or to a short sighted economy that goes on the theory that the schools will progress just as well and the pupils acquire just as much benefit without the superintendence of an experienced and efficient man.

A comparison of the schools and the students where they have and have not had a superintendent leaves no chance for an argument as to which is the better. The supervisory system shows better teachers, longer school years, increased attendance in the high schools, the rapid introduction of courses in the practical arts and so many other obvious benefits that an enumeration of them is superfluous.

One of the great defects in the present law has been that towns might rescind their action at any annual meeting and dispense with the superintendence of their schools. This was more far-reaching and disastrous than might at first appear for, under the law combining the superintendence of schools, if one town took this action it effectively shut off the superintendence of the two or three other towns with which it might be combined. Thus it was easy for the minority to rule in the supervisory union.

Another defect of the present law is that under it the superintendent may do as much or as little as the local school board may see fit. In other words, he has been subject to the orders and dictation of the school board, no matter what his ideas or conception of the subject of education. Thus it has happened that the principal duties of many paid superintendents have been to visit the schools, deliver books and supplies and perform purely routine functions which it is conceded on all sides are of but little practical use.

There are more than 100 towns in New Hampshire where there is and has been no superintendent other than the school board and these towns embrace 23 per cent of the entire school enrollment of the state.

The law that is advocated by Mr. Morrison and the other educators of the state is one that shall require all towns to have a professional superintendent. They believe that the state should be systematically distributed in to supervisory unions and that each should have a thoroughly qualified man to look after the schools, whose pay should be adequate for such a man and should come, half from the state and half from the towns of the district.

In other words, they maintain that the law which is now optional and a decidedly negligible matter, should be made obligatory. They hold, further, that the superintendent of schools is of the same relative importance to them as is the board of selectmen, to the town itself and that without him a more or less chaotic and imprudent condition is bound to result.

The total enrollment of the schools of this state is now something over 60,000 and the approximate cost on the present supervisory system is $26,000. For an additional $10,000, it is argued, this expenditure might be made of great lasting and practical benefit, whereas it is now a questionable outlay, owing to the lack of uniformity and appreciation of the system.

It is claimed that there is a great and growing increase of sentiment in favor of the change and that there will be but little genuine opposition to it in the next legislature.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE IN CONVENTION

Interested suffrage workers from all sections of the state have arrived in Manchester to attend the annual convention of the New Hampshire Equal Suffrage association, which opened Wednesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. building. The Rev. Burton W. Lockhart, D. D., offered the invocation in opening, and Mrs. Olive Hand Clarke, president of the Manchester association, extended the welcome, to which Mrs. Mary I. Wood of Portsmouth responded. Addresses were made by suffrage workers and tea was served. Mrs. George Bingham and Mrs. Sherman B. Harbroughs presiding. Assisting in serving, clad in snow white gowns and wearing the yellow symbol, were Miss Esther Fair ness, Miss Doris Fellows, Miss Margaret Backfield, Miss Olive Taggart, Miss Mildred Chamberlain, Miss Ramona Panton, Miss Cordelia Bingham and Miss Florence Nichols. In the gathering was Mrs. Winston Churchill.

Wednesday evening there were two discussions, the first was when Dr. Stanley Colt of London, who was to have made the address, did not reach this country in time and the second was when Mr. Harold Marshall of Melrose, lecturer and writer, who was to have made an address in his place, was uninformed and came to Portsmouth instead of Manchester, and so late that he could not reach Manchester that night.

Today there will be a business session.

NO WORD FROM THE NORTH CAROLINA

Washington, Nov. 11.—Sec. Daniels today ordered the division of operations in the Navy Department, to get into communication as quickly as possible with the armored cruisers North Carolina and Tennessee, to learn if one of them had met with a mishap as had been rumored during the day.

The Secretary and other navy officials said they did not feel the slightest apprehension for the safety of either vessel, but thought it advisable to allay any alarm by getting definite advice. Rumors were in the air throughout the day that the North Carolina had been blown up by a mine at Beirut, but so far as could be discovered all reports originated within the United States.

Officials pointed out that while cable communication with Turkey is slow, they were in touch with Constantinople and Beirut, from which points any accidents would have been promptly reported.

Similarly British ships near Turkey would have reported to the British Admiralty. The Navy Department has heard directly from the North Carolina and the Tennessee Nov. 2. The former was at Beirut, Syria, and the latter at Mytilene, off the coast of Greece.

On Nov. 8 and 9 inquiries were sent by cable by the department to the two vessels to learn the basis of reports that one of the American cruisers had landed Marines but no answer came.

No Apprehension, Say Officers

It developed late today that no effort had been made to learn whether the cable companies had been able to transmit the messages. Sec. Daniels at once ordered Commander Cronin to trace the messages.

Naval officials refused to be disturbed by the rumors of disaster to the North Carolina.

"There is no least apprehension for the ship," was the official answer to all inquiries.

The North Carolina has been in constant wireless communication with the Tennessee. The ship would not have left the harbor without notifying the Navy Department, officials said.

Telegrams from anxious relatives and friends of the officers and men of the cruiser North Carolina reached the Navy Department tonight from all parts of the country. To each inquiry Sec. Daniels replied that, while he was without official word from the cruiser he felt positive no harm had befallen her.

The difficulties of communicating with the ships make a reply uncertain. Wireless messages may be forwarded by courtesy of some of the British warships in those waters. The cable from Syria is held by the Ottoman Government, which is refusing to transmit messages.

Both the ships, however, have Turkish pilots aboard, who are familiar with the mine fields in those localities and Navy Department officials expected today the commanders would get into the zone of communication soon.

Americans in No Danger
Americans in Turkey have not been molested in any way since the outbreak of the war, and are in no danger. Ambassador Morgenthau reported today.

The Turkish Minister of War informed Mr. Morgenthau that Turkey was anxious to conduct the war with every possible consideration and courtesy to noncombatants, but that if England and Greece attacked any unfortified towns reprisals would follow in the detention of their subjects.

From references in official messages to apprehension on the part of Turkish officials that Greece would bombard unfortified towns on the Ottoman coast, the belief grew in diplomatic circles today that participation of Greece in the general European war was becoming more probable.

Official advices from Bulgaria and Rumania have been meager and there has been little light shed here on the report that Russian diplomacy was endeavoring to persuade Serbia to give Bulgaria a section of Macedonia as a boon for the latter's entry into the war.

Turkey, according to its War Minister, has neither soldiers nor ships to send against its enemies to bombard their unfortified towns, and would have only one recourse—to hold the subjects of the enemy as hostages.

Mr. Morgenthau reported, however, that he was making rapid progress in arriving at an understanding with the Ottoman officials regarding the departure of British and French subjects, and that he had already secured the release of several Englishmen who had been imprisoned. He said misunderstandings on the questions of detained British and French subjects were daily being removed.

AWARDED VERDICT OF $2,537.50

The jury in the United States District Court on Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $2,537.50 in the suit of Henry B. Finley, administrator of Paul Duquette of Claremont, against the Monks Mills of that town.

The action was for $7,000 damages for the death of Duquette who on Feb. 1913, while working in the defendants' mill, was horribly burned by the tipping over of one of the dye kettles, and he died from his injuries on April of the same year. The action was brought by his administrator and it has been on trial here since Tuesday before Judge Aldrich.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Tarbell were called to Boston Wednesday by the death of a nephew.

Nature's Own Wrapping Keeps Tobacco Best

No artificial package—tin, bag, or tin-foil and paper—can keep tobacco as well as the natural leaf wrapper that holds all the original flavor and moisture in the Sickle plug. When you whittle off a pipeful, you always get fresh tobacco, that burns slowly, and smokes cool and sweet.

Chopped-up, "package" tobacco loses much of its moisture before it goes into the package, and keeps getting drier all the time. And the drier it gets, the faster it burns in your pipe, and the more it bites your tongue. Only fresh tobacco gives real pipe-satisfaction—and only tobacco you cut off the Sickle plug as you use it, can be fresh.

Economical, too—no waste—no package to pay for—more tobacco. Get a Sickle plug from your dealer today.

Beecham's Pills

WHEN a remedy has been tried in thousands of homes for over sixty years and has attained the largest sale of any medicine in the world, it is because it has been found to have unequalled merit. Beecham's Pills have been so tried and have well proved to be the best help mankind has ever known.

EVERYBODY needs to help Nature from time to time. The liver becomes torpid, the stomach weak, the bowels inactive through some accident or carelessness. Then discomfort comes and serious, lasting sickness may follow; but this can be avoided if the important organs of digestion are given the help they need.

WHEN Beecham's Pills clear the system of impurities, stimulate the liver, regulate the bowels—the signs of biliousness disappear. Headaches, nervousness, depressions, stomach pains, dullness, bad nights, bitter taste cease to cause discomfort. Beecham's Pills owe their great fame to their power to relieve indigestion and biliousness.

Insure Better Health

Beecham's Pills are recognized as the best corrective of disordered conditions of the organs of digestion. They are reliable and effective; they act gently but promptly without causing trouble or any after ill effect.

There is no wisdom in delay. You ought to have on hand, ready for use the moment there is need, this matchless family remedy. Then discomfort will soon disappear and little ills will not become serious sicknesses.

The Proper Stand.

The governor-elect of Colorado promptly takes a stand that will be heartily approved by the orderly element of the American people in every part of the country. This is that peace must be restored and maintained in Colorado—by peaceable means if possible, by force if necessary.

All are familiar with the turbulent conditions that have prevailed in the Colorado coal fields for a long time. Business has been interrupted, there has been violence and bloodshed and there have been times when the conditions bordered closely upon those of civil war. Law and order have been thrown to the winds, the civil authorities defied and military intervention made necessary. The president of the United States recently attempted to restore peace, but his efforts have thus far been unsuccessful and there appears to be no end to this destructive and costly industrial warfare in prospect, unless it is in the promise of the newly elected governor that it must come to an end through one means or another. He says: "I shall try to terminate the disastrous and unnecessary coal strike by peaceful methods. Failing, I shall use the entire force of the state to bring about a settlement."

That is a business-like statement, and if Governor Carlson lives up to his program after taking office, as there is every reason to believe he will, there will be a change in the situation which will be creditable to the state and of direct benefit to all of its inhabitants. The governor-elect believes capital and labor are so interdependent that neither can survive without the other, and will leave no stone unturned to re-establish conditions under which both can be profitably employed in Colorado. He further elaborates his program as follows: "In approaching the problems confronting Colorado I shall try to be absolutely fair, but I am determined that the state shall have peace, that the state shall be respected and that it shall reclaim its sovereignty if it has surrendered. The governor of a state is its supreme officer, and as the governor of Colorado I intend to do the things that will make progress, peace and prosperity possible here—if not by pacific methods, by force."

It is to be hoped and expected that this promise will be made good. Too long has Colorado rested under a blight that has attracted the attention of the country and heaped disgrace upon the state. It is time for a change, and if the new governor has the force which his statements indicate there will be a change in the near future, and one that will be decidedly for the better.

A band of Ute Indians from the government reservation in Utah recently invaded Colorado to secure their winter's supply of meat, and they refused to return until the game warden had raised a little army of men and threatened to call out the troops. So it seems that white men are not the only ones who are willing to hunt on "posited" lands. And there are some of them who should be dealt with just as these Indians were.

Changes in charters are still taking the attention of cities here and there and such changes are frequently made. There may be room for improvement in most of the charters, but there will never be a charter that in itself will give any city the right sort of government. That depends upon the citizens, and when they attend to their duties as they should government affairs do not go far astray under any charter.

The Scotch people are a good people; but some of them lose their heads occasionally, the same as other folks. Such are those who pelted the statue of Andrew Carnegie in Dumferline the other day because the great ironmaster is able to detect some good in the Germans. The time will come when those who took part in that silly performance will be very much ashamed of their action.

Wizard Edison has returned from a brief trip to the Middle West and gone right to work. When asked for an interview he said he had talked enough and that he must now accomplish something. Mr. Edison is a man who does accomplish, leaving the talking to others. And there are plenty of people ready to attend to that end of the job.

Mount Vesuvius appears to be in sympathy with the troublesome mood that pervades the earth. It is almost in order to paraphrase an old expression so as to read, "You that have explosions to explode, prepare to explode them now."

Some people are already worrying over a predicted scarcity of imported nuts for the Thanksgiving dinner. Those who cannot cheerfully rise above a little deprivation like that do not deserve a Thanksgiving dinner.

Automobiles are reported to be killing rabbits and pheasants in Pennsylvania. Either the game there must be slower than in most states or some of the autoists are mightily exceeding the speed limits.

The war in Europe is booming the postal savings bank business in this country. "Safety first" is evidently the motto of the patrons of these depositories.

THE BELOVED ADVENTURER

CHAPTER VIII.

A Partner to Providence.

Jimmy Holt, cashier, "on the works" of the National Construction Company, shut his day book with a cheerful smack, closed the safe, and switched off the light over his desk.

"Ready to go—no? Well, I'm off—night!" he said, and departed whistling.

"Overgrown cub!" Peterson, General Manager of Operations, muttered irritably, and dismissed Jimmy from his mind. Peterson's humor was of the blackest, and he now gave himself to a close scrutiny of his personal and very private affairs, with most unsatisfactory results. His need for money was really desperate—the State penitentiary loomed unpleasantly near unless he could replace, before the week-end day, now not far off, certain trust funds which he had lost to reckless speculation, and his assets were totally exhausted. His gloomily brooding eyes rested on the safe, and from speculation his expression quickly changed to furtive determination. Not long before the combination of the safe had been changed, and was now supposed to be known to none "on the works" excepting Holt. Chance, however, had given Mr. Peterson an opportunity to learn the magic numbers, and with characteristic thoughtfulness they had been jotted down in his pocket memorandum book. In a few moments the iron door swung open.

"Not worth the chance," Peterson decided, when he had computed the small amount of miscellaneous cash. As he reopened the safe, a sudden thought brushed the awe from his brow and twisted his lips into a triumphant and malicious grin. It had occurred to him that the money for the pay-roll, five thousand dollars, would arrive by express on the following day, and he placed in the safe over night. Instantly every worry left him—the money was as good as in his pocket, and with very little trouble all danger to himself could be obliterated. Certainly his luck had turned—he would take advantage of this complacent mood of fortune to urge his suit with Elsie Manning, who he was compelled to reluctantly admit, had been strangely cold, considering her unimportance—just a pretty little country person—as compared to that of the General Manager of Operations of the National Construction Company, to say nothing of personal attractions that had, he flattered himself, hitherto proven irresistible.

The moonlight lent romantic charm to the pretty cottage which was the girl's home, and as he drew near, Peterson was gripped by an emotion he had never before experienced—for the first time he realized that he was passionately in love and not moved merely by a casual fancy. With quickened heart-beat he hurried forward, only to come to an abrupt stop as he caught sight of two figures in the shadows of the veranda. There was no mistaking—Elsie Manning was nestling close in Holt's embrace, and even as Peterson looked, she raised her lips to meet his lingering kiss.

A surge of primitive rage swelled in the onlooker's breast, and his teeth bared in a savage snarl as he swiftly drew his revolver. The impulse of the male animal robbed of the female of its choice, to kill, was strong upon him, but the cunning and caution of the man held it in check.

"Be wise—wait—you'll get a safe chance, one way or another!" he whispered, and Peterson pocketed his weapon. All sign of agitation vanished from his face, and, whistling cheerfully, he strode noisily forward. The figures hastily drew apart.

"Holt, Miss Elsie—hello, Jimmy!" he said jovially. "Thought I might run across you here," he added cordially to Holt, as they found seats, controlling by main strength the rage that again boiled as he noted the glow of happiness on the younger man's face, and the girl's shy joyousness. They drifted into general and idle chat.

"Number Seven, eastbound, is just about due to pass, isn't she?" Holt asked, glancing down the hill to where the single track railway disclosed itself as parallel silver bars.

"Yes, I can hear it," Elsie said. "It always reminds Mother to wind the clock," she added with a musical chuckle.

"Seems—seems like I hear a train coming west," Holt hazarded. "Guess not, of course, but—" He stopped, listening uneasily. There could be no doubt about it—from the West came the roar of Number Seven as she swept down the long grade from the foot-hills, and from the opposite direction the panting of a big mogul as it breasted the slope.

"Look!" Jimmy suddenly shouted, and sprang to his feet.

An Number Seven train, thundered into sight, passenger—Number Nine, which should have been waiting upon the siding at Baxter Station, two miles east, tore round the shoulder of a hill and came on with undiminished speed.

Lord Cecil, with fair measure of success, had been striving to forget the discomfort of the dusty day coach and the distressing roughness of the road-bed, in dreams of the future—dreams into which there came a slender, girlish form and wistful eyes. Behind him lay curious adventures; before him, so far as a man might judge, lay a secure, flower-bordered pathway, the progress along which would be made pleasant by wealth, and, recurring in his fancies, the companionship of a strange little girl with a face like a flower and a heart like a Knight of Arthur's round table.

Suddenly his every sense seemed paralyzed by sounds and shocks beyond human imagining. He was vaguely aware of splintering timbers, of shivering glass, of wild shrieks as passengers started up and were hurled from their feet—then, silent blackness, like deepest sleep, shut down, crushing him into unconsciousness.

Almost before the two trains had met in mutual destruction, Holt, Peterson and Elsie, had sprung from the veranda, and were racing toward the scene of the catastrophe, hurrying impulsively to lend what aid they might. Given before they had covered the comparatively short distance, however, smoke began to curl upward from the river and overturned coaches, and a moment later, leaping red flames dimmed the moonlight as the oil from the old-fashioned lamps spread quick destruction. When they reached the wreck it seemed that all the passengers had already extricated themselves, or been assisted to safety by those unhurt. As they stared in tascaped horror at a half crushed and blazing coach, however, a man crawled painfully forth, and Holt sprang forward to aid him.

"I'm alright!" the passenger gasped. "But there's a man in there—I couldn't get him out!"

He pointed toward the burning coach. "Come on!" Holt shouted, and, without waiting for a reply climbed into the car. Peterson hesitated, and threw back Under Elsie's scornful glance he writhed uncomfortably.

"No use for two to go—and we've got to look out for your safety," he stammered, but the girl turned away, watching fearfully for the reappearance of her lover. Presently he came, stumbling through the smoke, bearing the body of a man.

"Bring him to the house," Elsie said with eager pity, and gave Jimmy Holt a glance to win which he would have gone through ten times the dire peril he had just passed. She hurried ahead, and with Peterson's assistance, Holt carried toward the cottage the unconscious Lord Cecil.

An hour later Cecil opened his eyes, glanced incomprehendingly about the simple bedroom in which he lay, and then smiled into the troubled eyes of the girl bending over him.

"I don't know what it's all about, but I'm sure you're awfully good, y'know," he said, and went to sleep.

"He'll be all right now—nothing the matter except shock and bump on the head," Holt said with cheerful relief. "He'll be up for breakfast," he added optimistically, and took his departure.

While not quite so energetic a conversant as Jimmy had declared, Cecil was moving about the next day without much difficulty, and he assured Mrs. Manning and Elsie would need to impose upon their hospitality longer than was required to clear the railway line. In the afternoon he insisted upon making himself useful to the extent of carrying to Jimmy at the construction company's temporary office an invitation to supper.

Half an hour before, Peterson had received the express package—forwarded by horseman from the Junction—containing the five thousand dollars for the pay-roll, and had handed over the money to Holt, taking his receipt therefor. Holt, wrapped the packet of bills in a sheet of brown paper, secured it with a rubber band, and placed it in the safe. He had then left the office to arrange with the foremen of the gangs for paying off the men on the following day.

No sooner had Holt left the office than Peterson applied himself to the combination of the safe, and in a few moments had extracted the package containing the pay-roll money, replacing it with a dummy package of identical appearance, the latter maneuver being in case Holt should chance to look in the safe again that day. He hastily closed the safe and pocketed

CURRENT OPINION

Every German Development Provoked England's Envy.

Every one in Germany knows how untiringly the Kaiser and his counselors worked year in and year out to stem the tide of unscrupulous calumny of the press under Lord Northcliffe in England and of the decadent boulevard press in Paris and to preserve amicable relations with both neighbors.

Germany's affiliations with the sciences shows itself in every direction. The country's commerce and its preparedness for war were not accidental, but were a science like its encyclopedias, its universities and its culture. The same spirit animated its commercial development, and the most beautiful ships the world has seen became its pride and its just reward. Every step forward provoked the envy of England.—By Rev. Thomas C. Hull, Designate Roosevelt Professor at Berlin University.

the real money-package as footsteps sounded alongside the building. A few moments later Lord Cecil entered and inquired for Holt, and was informed that he would find him on the works. Thither he therefore went, and found that young man wearing a slightly worried expression, which, however, vanished as Cecil delivered his message.

The cause of Holt's concern was a brief conversation he had had with the Sheriff a few moments before, during which that official had warned him that a gang of yeggmen was believed to be in the region. Holt's thoughts had at once jumped to the five thousand dollars lying in the safe too secure in the temporary building which served as office, and which was totally deserted after he and Peterson left in the evening.

When Cecil had gone, Holt returned to the office, to find that Peterson had already left, a fact that afforded him some satisfaction, it being entirely agreeable to him that no one whosever should know that he intended to carry off his person until the next day the money he had left it, and he carefully concealed it in an inside pocket, then hurried away to keep his engagement at the Manning home.

Peterson, meanwhile, had been busy making arrangements with a couple of tramps whose camp he had discovered, and who, upon sight of the two twenty-dollar bills he produced, expressed every willingness to carry out his wishes, and assured him, with corroborative anecdotes, of their entire competency for such a task as he set them.

"There will be enough loose cash in the safe to pay you for your trouble, aside from what I have advanced," Peterson assured them. "All I want you to do is to remove and destroy the brown paper package you will see. Have you everything you need?"

"Just you leave it to us, Bo," one of the pair told him reassuringly. "There's a flask of 'soup' buried pretty close to where you're standin', an' Rags is got a cake of soap. Just you leave it to us."

Mr. Peterson departed, to spend a wakeful night, and to trust devoutly, during the latter half, that no one besides himself had heard the muffled knocking boom that came from the direction of the construction company's office. Such, however, had not been the case. At the very moment when the explosion took place, the energetic Sheriff was passing within fifty yards of the building which should have been dark and silent, but from which came this significant choked roar, and in which a candle was glimmering. Before the film of smoke had cleared, the Sheriff was inside the building, and two disgraced gentlemen of the road, who were just on the point of removing from the doorless safe the fifty cash, found themselves looking into the muzzle of a singularly large and convincing revolver.

Soon after daylight the Sheriff and the General Manager of Operations were in consultation in the disordered office.

"But I tell you there wasn't no package in the safe," the officer declared positively. "I was here two seconds after she popped, an' they didn't have a chance to touch a thing. There wasn't no package of bills nor no other package in that safe."

Peterson thought swiftly. An element of mystery had entered into the affair.

The wrathful hoboes believed they had been the victims of a "plant," and were maintaining a sullen silence—there was no danger to be apprehended from them if they accused him, no one would believe. But what had become of the dummy package? Then the obvious solution flashed into his mind, and it was with difficulty that he restrained an exclamation of victorious triumph. His revenge—safe, sure, and terrible was at hand.

"Then there is but one conclusion," he said with apparent reluctance and regret. "The pay-roll money was removed from the safe before it was blown open. Mr. Holt, the cashier, is the only person to whom the combination is known. It is even possible that he arranged this safe-blowing as a blind—though that, of course, may have been a coincidence. If the latter he has probably skipped out—if he was counting on this safe robbery, he will be around still, playing innocent."

"Looks like you are right—though wouldn't he thought it of Jimmy," the Sheriff agreed sadly. "We'd better look him up."

ered Lord Cecil.

"You are out early—looking for news?" Peterson greeted him sneeringly.

"Yes, dropped by to see how my patient was coming on," Jimmy answered cheerfully, too joyous in his youth and triumphant love to observe the other's manner.

"Well, that gentleman's health is an important subject, of course," Peterson replied, "but there is something else you are likely to find more serious. The pay-roll money has been stolen!"

"How do you know—the safe is locked?" Holt exclaimed, and looked searchingly at the Manager.

"The safe was blown open last night, Jimmy," the Sheriff cut in, with obvious disapproval of the Manager's manner. "I know the pay-roll money wasn't in it, and Mr. Peterson says you must have removed it, you being the only one who could open the safe."

"Oh, I see!" Holt exclaimed, and his face lit up with delight. "By George, my hunch was real! When you told me about those yeggs being in the neighborhood, I got uneasy about the money in the safe, and thought it would be safer to pack it around with me, if no one knew. Here it is, safe as a church!" he added triumphantly, and produced from his pocket a flat brown parcel. The concerned looks faded from the faces of the Sheriff and Lord Cecil, and into that of Elsie, which had grown white and pinched, the color flooded.

"Course I knew it was all right, Jimmy," the Sheriff began apologetically, but Peterson interrupted with a sarcastic laugh.

"Nice bluff," he sneered. "Think you can stand us off until you can make a get-away, now that your little trick has fizzled, eh? Had do we know what is in that package? Show us the money!"

With eyes blazing with indignation Holt tore open the package.

"Then look," he began, then stopped suddenly, amazement and chagrin spreading over his features. He had offered for inspection a handful of worthless paper cut to the size of banknotes.

"I thought so," Peterson commented spitefully, and the Sheriff's expression grew stern as he stepped forward.

"Reckon you better come along with me," he said coldly.

With a heartbroken cry Elsie threw herself upon Holt's breast.

"I don't believe it, Jimmy boy! And I will love you always!" she sobbed. A flame of jealous hatred leaped into Peterson's eyes. Cecil caught the expression, and vague thoughts and recollections shaped themselves quickly.

"I rather think, y'know, that Mr. Peterson has the money in his pocket," Mr. Sheriff, he said quietly.

"For an instant Peterson stared wildly at this unexpected accuser, while panic tore at his brain.

"Oh, I am glad—glad!" the girl cried, and clung closer to her sweetheart. With a snarl of fright and rage Peterson leaped back, drawing his revolver. "But I'll get you, if I hang for it!"

he screamed, and leveled his weapon. With blazing eyes Elsie strove to cover the body of her sweetheart with her own. The revolver cracked murderously, but the bullet sped futilely toward the sky. As the assassin's finger had tightened on the trigger, Lord Cecil had sprang forward and caught his wrist with a steel-like grasp. An instant later the smoking revolver had been twisted from Peterson's hand.

"You might, ah, remove this person, Mr. Sheriff," Cecil suggested, "but, to make sure, if you will permit me—" he slipped his hand inside the coat of the now cowering man, and produced a brown packet, which he handed to the Sheriff with a smile.

"If you think it worth while to open it, you will find my surprise was correct," he added. Then suddenly he dropped settled upon him like a fog. "It, er, is quite simple, y'know," he drawled wearily, in response to the bewildered looks directed upon him. "Not in the least interestin'. I happened to be passin' the window of the office, an' saw this person open the safe an' change packages, an' when I heard that Mr. Holt was the only one supposed to know the combination—why, the deduction was too obvious to miss, y'know."

Three hours later an Eastbound train—the line being again clear—stood at Baxter Station. Lord Cecil shook hands cordially with Jimmy Holt, and then, with a kindly smile, turned to Elsie. "I'm sorry I can't stay to the wedding, but I wish you every happiness," he said gently.

"You—we will never forget you," the girl said, and tears sparkled in her eyes. "I don't dare to think of what might have happened if you had not come into our lives, like—like a partner to Providence!"

Her cheeks grew rosy red, but she met his eyes bravely. Firmly she raised her arms, and drew down his head.

"I am going to kiss you goodbye," she said.

The train began to move, and Cecil swung himself upon the rear platform and stood smiling back at them until distance blurred their forms.

"A Partner to Providence"—by Jave, that was a pretty thing to say," he murmured, "an' it was a pretty thing for her to kiss me like that—"

His eyes grew dreamy—he was thinking of the thrill of happiness he would know if ever other lips he remembered as slightly parted in a little wistful smile should give themselves in soft surrender to his own.

CHURCH NOTES

The Ladies Aid Society of the Pearl Street Baptist church met in the vestry on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The afternoon was devoted to business followed by a social hour. Supper was served from 5.30 to 7.00 o'clock and consisted of baked beans, bread, pickles, cream pie, fancy cake, tea. The committee in charge were Mrs. W. T. Lord, Mrs. Elizabeth Chandler, Mrs. Marion Dexter.

At the conclusion of supper Mrs. Albert Plummer's Sunday school class of boys presented a pleasing program which consisted of games and contests and light refreshments were served.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist church met in the vestry on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The afternoon was devoted to a business meeting and supper was served at six o'clock. The menu embraced, fish chowder, crackers, rolls, pickles, assorted pie, cake and tea. Mrs. C. A. Parmenter presented a well arranged program which included the following:

Scripture, from the November Missionary Magazine.
 Prayer—Mrs. James Schorman.
 Report from the district meeting at Exeter—Mrs. Chadwick.
 Roll call, answered by "My Hopes for the Coming Year".
 Snapshots from India.
 "The Child in the Midst."
 (a) Right of Mother and Child—Mrs. J. Howard Grover, Mrs. C. A. Parmenter.
 (b) Superstition and Cruelties—Mrs. J. True Davis.
 (c) Care of Children—Mrs. Percy Plaisted.

 There was a good attendance and all were much interested in the evening's program.

WILL EXHIBIT DUM DUM BULLETS

Berlin, Nov. 11.—By wireless to Sayville, L. I., Lieut. General Hellingsworth, Inspector of German military roads, with headquarters at Cambrai, in Northern France, is making public exhibitions of dum dum bullets found on British prisoners and also of British rifles equipped with a contrivance to cut off and perforate the points of bullets. The above information was given out officially to the press in Berlin today.

James Orville Wood, a resident of Sweet Avenue, is the proudest workman of the Frank Jones Brewing Co., where he is employed as a driver. His pride is due as the result of a visit of that over busy bird, the stork, who left two bounding twin boys as an addition to the family. The father and mother have been showered with congratulations on the arrival of the youngsters.

SHOP IN YOUR OWN CITY FIRST!

This "Made in America" movement can be brought a little nearer home to each individual by emphasizing this suggestion: "Patronize the stores of your home city." Each man is entitled to spend his own money where it will buy the most—whether it be in Rome or Asia. But in fairness—is it not wisdom before purchasing elsewhere to see what the stores of our own city have to offer? The prosperity of each of us is tied up with the prosperity of his neighbor. We prosper together and suffer hard times together. Acquaint yourself with what the stores of your own city are offering by reading the advertising in this paper.

A MISSIONARY MOCK TRIAL

Enjoyed by the Women's Missionary Society of the Middle Street Baptist Church.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Middle Street Baptist church met in the chapel on Wednesday afternoon and a business meeting was held. It was voted to pick a barrel to send to a missionary, who is now on the frontier. The ladies devoted their time to sewing on linen for the Portsmouth hospital.

A supper was served at 6.45 to which all present did full justice. Following the supper was a very pleasing entertainment presented, entitled, "A Missionary Mock Trial—The Heathen Nations versus American Christians," and the cast consisted of the following:

Judge—Mrs. Samuel Moses.
District Attorney—Mrs. A. C. Wiley.
Defendant's Attorney—Mrs. Sidney Rand.
Defendant—Mrs. C. E. Hodgdon.
Sheriff—Mrs. Wilbur Shaw.
Deputy Sheriff—Mrs. C. W. Taylor.
Clerk—Mrs. Edward Patterson.
Court Crier—Mrs. Henry Soss-ville.

Government Wages War on Foot And Mouth Disease In Many States.

The dread foot and mouth disease is again being fought in the United States. Cattle in over a dozen states are quarantined and the Chicago stock yards were closed, thus sending up the price of meat. This rapidly spreading plague has appeared five times before in this country—namely, in 1870, 1880, 1881, 1902-03 and 1908. The outbreak in 1908 cost the department of agriculture $229,112 to stamp out. The loss to cattle men was very great, and many dairymen were put out of business. The present outbreak, according to the department of agriculture, appears to be fully as virulent as that of 1908. This picture shows how cattle exposed to the pestilence are killed. The animals are let into a deep trench—their own graves—and shot one by one. To hasten the destruction of the carcasses as well as to prevent their being dug up again by persons willing to obtain the price of the hides at the cost of spreading the disease over the entire country the hides are slashed and the carcasses cut open and covered with quicklime. It is most important that farmers, dairymen and cattle raisers aid quickly in eradicating the disease.

OBSEQUIESIsrael Cousins

The funeral services of Mr. Israel Cousins were held at the residence of Mr. Edward Burt on Sagamore avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 2.30. Rev. Percy W. Caswell, pastor of the Court Street Christian church, conducting the service. Mrs. Amy Priest sang "Another Friend Is Beckoning Us" and "I Know Not What the Future Hath." Interment took place in the family lot in Sagamore cemetery, under the direction of H. W. Nickerson. Rev. Mr. Caswell read the committal service at the grave.

PRAISE FOR BLUEJACKETS.

A splendid sight was seen at the Portsmouth theatre on Wednesday evening, when from seventy-five to one hundred bluejackets from the ships at the navy yard, mostly from the Paducah, occupied the entire front rows of the house.

All being in neat uniform, they made a very pretty showing. It was one of the most orderly crowds ever in the theatre, and their conduct on Wednesday evening is a great credit to them.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

The meeting of the W. C. T. U. held at the home of Mrs. Bertha Smart yesterday was well attended and very interesting. One pleasant feature of the meeting was the presence of Mrs. L. H. Perkins, the former beloved president and she was warmly greeted. After the usual routine business, plans were discussed for the winter work. Good news from Western Union was read by Miss Fannie Decker, that Colorado, Oregon and Arizona report victories for state-wide prohibition.

OPEN PLAINS LOOP

A section of the Plains loop of the Portsmouth Electric railway from Albany street crossing to Spiney road, which has been closed for the past three weeks owing to street repairs, was opened again today and all cars are now making a complete trip according to the schedule.

BREAK A CHILD'S COLD BY GIVING SYRUP OF FIGS

Cleanses the little liver and bowels and they get well quick.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait, give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When croup, cough, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, sneezes and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

U. S. TROOPS WILL SOON QUIT VERA CRUZ

Promise of Protection of Mexicans in that City and of No New Tax Levi is Satisfactory to President-- Will Be Left to Fight it out Among Themselves.

Washington, Nov. 11.—American troops probably will be ordered out of Vera Cruz very soon, leaving the Mexican factions to settle their own differences, as a result of the recent developments which have brought the guarantees the Washington Government demanded.

Carranza's promises not to remane customs duties collected by American officials during the occupation and to protect natives who have served Brigadier General Funston probably will be accepted as sufficient. Similar pledges from Gutierrez, the new provisional president, are expected. The American officials have collected several millions in customs dues which are to be turned over to the Mexican Government. That fact is taken by many officials as a guarantee that the Washington Government's demands will be complied with. Carranza's decree was received today by the State Department. It grants amnesty to all Mexicans who served the American Government in the war for their patriotic spirit in the protection of the United States and trusting to the justice of the Mexican Government. Nothing is said about protection for arms and munitions who took refuge in Vera Cruz. That assurance, however, have been given that they would not be harmed. The general opinion is that the Washington Government will not argue that question further.

The understanding among officials is that President Wilson is willing to withdraw the American forces, especially in view of the fact that a number of Villa and Carranza troops in that vicinity might raise further disturbances and delicate questions for the United States. The American troops would be withdrawn on the ground that the Aguanacientes convention ordered Carranza to issue the decree which he has now proclaimed and all factions are agreed to support the conditions set forth by the United States as a prerequisite to evacuation.

The impression prevails in many quarters that the United States will await the determination of who is the executive of Mexico—Carranza or Gutierrez before delivering the funds. Administration officials eagerly awaited news today of the sequel to the expiration of the Aguanacientes ultimatum which ordered General Carranza to surrender executive power in Mexico to Rafael Guerrero. The ultimatum expired last night and while official news was lacking, Mexico city dispatches said it was reported Villa's advance guard was marching southward on its way to the capital, the path to which is blocked by 10,000 Carranza troops.

In Administration circles today there was a feeling that eventually Carranza would yield to the convention. However, that was based more on the intimations in recent official reports than on advice received in the last twenty-four hours. The convention notified Carranza that it intended to inaugurate Gutierrez upon the expiration of the ultimatum, and that persons who did not recognize him would be considered in revolt against the constitutional government.

NEW HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE NOTES

New Hampshire College, Durham N. H., Nov. 11.—Professor C. R. Hewitt of the department of electrical engineering has just made a report to the water board of Chatham, N. J., on the new municipal electric light and pumping plant there, of the construction of which he has had supervision. The new plant has just been tested by Professor Hewitt and found to be efficient and to have cost less than the original estimates.

President E. T. Fairchild is in Washington, D. C., attending the annual meeting of the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experimental Stations. He is to present before the College Section of that Association a paper on "The Relation of the Agricultural College to Instruction in Agriculture and Home Economics in Secondary and Rural Schools, and What the College can do to promote General Rural School Improvement."

Herbert F. Moore, '98, assistant professor of engineering at the University of Illinois, has written words and music for a new New Hampshire song which will be used by the musical clubs this year. The new composition is called "New Hampshire, Sunset Song" to be sung as a solo with glee club accompaniment and chorus. Professor Moore is the author also of "Alma Mater," the college hymn.

Dr. A. E. Richards has organized a double quartet among the girls which will appear at the college concerts this year. The girls included are: Marion Chase, Seabrook; Marion Giddings, Wallham, Mass.; Hazel Clark, Manchester; Marion Dudley Lee, Mary Worcester, Durham; Helen Hughes, Chatham; Ruth Hadley, Durham; Rosina Dietrich, Hampton.

In place of the customary address at the chapel exercises here today there was a concert given by the students. There was singing of college songs by the student body, especially the songs to be sung in Manchester at the football game with Rhode Island, and there were selections by the girls' glee club, the mandolin quintet, and the college orchestra.

The quintet includes this year Glen Loomis, Goff's Falls; E. C. Fisher, Stafford, Conn.; R. C. Chabane, Stafford, Conn.; Marion Broggin, Milford, and L. F. Brown, Rochester. The girls' glee club was led by Miss Genevieve Charbonneau of Nashua. The club manager this year is Miss Julia Roberts, of Durham.

Marion Broggin led the orchestra, and accompanist was Paul Ward of Nashua.

GERMAN EXECUTED AN AMERICAN

Walloped a German Officer and is Filled Full of Bullets. New York, Nov. 11.—A special dispatch to the New York Sun says the Daily Graphic of London gives a detailed account of the reported execution by the Germans of George Wheeler, an American, of Boston.

Wheeler, according to the story, was arrested by a detachment of Uhlans and the following morning was taken before a court of German officers, with another prisoner, Phil Rader, an American newspaper correspondent and aviator, whose home is in Los Angeles, and who since has enlisted in the French flying corps.

The Daily Graphic says: "Wheeler was searched, and this so enraged him that he cried out: 'This is a way to treat an American!' An officer standing by told him

GIRLS! HAVE BEAUTIFUL, LUSTROUS, FLUFFY HAIR--25 CENT DANDERINE

No more dandruff or falling hair--A real surprise Awaits you.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine. It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine. Danderine now all drug stores recommend it apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; fresh, new, fluffy hair and an incomparable gloss and lustre and try as you will that if he did not like such treatment he should have stayed at home, rather than be taken to the barber shop, and catching the officer under the jaw told him so.

"For a few seconds not a word was spoken. Then a command was rapped out in German and Wheeler was unchained from Rader and led to the other side of the room. A few more questions were addressed to Wheeler and the two were led back to their improvised jail.

"Next morning Wheeler was placed against a wall and a firing squad put 30 bullets into him. And in close that ghastly scene Rader saw Wheeler's body thrown into a shallow grave. "Mr. Rader was led to a waiting motor car and taken to Valenciennes, where he was led before the general, who learning that the captive desired nothing more than to return to Paris, made out a pass for him, promising to join Rader at dinner in Paris very soon.

"Rader is a representative of an American news service (scripps) and took up aviation with the intention of accompanying in another machine. Lieut. Porte on the first part of his proposed trans-Atlantic flight, returning to Newfoundland and giving the news of Lieut. Porte up to the time he left.

"Going to Europe in his capacity of a newspaper correspondent at the opening of the war, Rader saw a cavalry detachment approaching and ran his car up to the cavalrymen with a cheery 'Hello, boys!' The officer, a Frenchman, demanded in perfect English, who the stranger was and where he came from, and announced that the detachment was a body of Uhlans and that Rader was their prisoner. Late that night, Rader says, he was joined by another American prisoner, George Wheeler of Boston."

BOSTON LETTER

Boston, Nov. 12.—With the expectation that the United States Postoffice Department will be obliged to handle a record parcel post mail this Christmas, Postmaster General Burleson has sent out a general order to postmasters urging them to get busy at once and map out plans for the Christmas rush. In his general order the postmaster general calls the attention of postmasters to the necessity of taking in advance such action as may be practicable to relieve the congestion which might otherwise be experienced in postoffice lobbies during the ensuing holiday mail rush. So far as it is for the acceptance of insured C. O. D. and registered parcels. He states that attention should be invited to the necessity of having parcels properly wrapped and indorsed.

Boston, Nov. 12.—Young Women's Christian Associations in all sections of the world are observing a week of prayer for peace. The world's association with a membership of about 727,028, has well organized work in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Finland, Italy, France, Austria, Denmark, Portugal, Sweden, South Africa, China, Japan, India and Australia. The United States has the largest membership, 324,982. Germany comes next with 250,000. Associations in all parts of New England are observing the week of prayer. Members of the Boston Association have pledged $500 this year to help maintain a secretary in Turkey.

Boston, Nov. 12.—Opportunity for young people between the ages of 14 and 18 to divide their time in school between instructive work and systematic vocational training will mark the education of the future, the opinion of Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education. Dr. Snedden is impressed with the possibilities in the compulsory continuation school idea, now being tried in Boston, and in it he sees a definite step toward such "half and half" education for those who desire to fit themselves for the earning of a livelihood in this way.

Boston, Nov. 12.—Once a month is often enough for a child to go to a picture show is the opinion of Miss Alice Howard Spaulding, a student and lecturer, who has done much to introduce the study of the drama into the public schools. Miss Spaulding declares that too much of the movies is dangerous to the youngsters, who under no conditions should be permitted to devote themselves to the excitement of considering them an almost reel.

you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair, but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and fluffy at first—yes, but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never falls out stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

daily aggressivity. They should be a luxury of a treat for now and then, she suggests.

Boston, Nov. 12.—Whether a gift of stock without the written endorsement of the giver is a gift or not a gift, is the question the full bench of the supreme court is asked to decide under the will of the late Adeline L. Nickerson. Arguments in the case have been heard. Maivina J. Emerson, long a domestic for Mrs. Nickerson, claimed that before her death her employer gave her a certificate for ten shares of preferred stock of the American Agricultural Company, a Connecticut corporation. The certificate was given into her hand, but the deceased omitted to endorse the certificate, that is, to sign the assignment blank on its back. Judge Loring who heard the case as single justice in the supreme court and reserved it for the full bench, decided that Mrs. Nickerson really intended to make a valid gift of the stock to her servant.

FOREIGN ARMY OFFICERS BUYING MORE HORSES

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 11.—The number of horses purchased by foreign army officers is increasing daily, according to local horse dealers today. It was stated that the buyers have bought about 6000 on the local market.

The army officers are buying only horses, explaining that the auto-truck has largely supplanted mules in foreign armies.

Good Enough Reason

This little incident has been told of Thomas Hone, the sailors' musician. Seeing him approaching one day one of a group of sailors announced his intentions of having some fun. He stepped forward and removed his hat, revealing a perfectly smooth crown and asked:

NEW YORK HERALD, SUNDAY, NOV. 15.

Twenty-four special feature pages will make doubly attractive the Sunday New York Herald of November 15. These comprise a twelve-page Fashion Magazine, edited by Blanche G. Merritt, the only magazine of its kind issued free with a newspaper, and eight-page Magazine Section, in which absorbing articles are presented in novel way, and a four-page section devoted to the best of clean comedies.

A page is devoted to "Joffre, the Silent," the man to whom France looks for the victory of her arms. General Joffre believes the only tactics of war are the offensive, and although he may sympathize with incompetence he never overlooks failure. Alexander Baird's character study of the man now in supreme command of the French forces is intimate and accurate.

A page will be devoted to Richard G. Conover's account of "Famous Retreats in History" among which the masterly retirement of General von Kluck undoubtedly will find a place. "Vierge's famous painting, the 'Boulder Battle of Shipka Pass,' pictures the romantic fury of the fight between the Turkish troops and the resisting Russians—a battle in which guns and bayonets were discarded and the Tussians and great stones rolled down from the mountain top upon the advancing foe. Nadherny has redrawn this painting, preserving the spirit of determination as expressed in the original. It will appear as the front cover of the Magazine Section.

BARR-EDLEFSON. Son of Late Vice President of the B. & M. Railroad Mar- ried at Winchester.

Mrs. Helen Gilman Edleffson, was married Wednesday evening at the home of her father, William E. Edleffson, 5 Pine street, Winchester, to Robert Cooper Barr, son of the late Frank Barr, vice president of the Boston and Maine railroad. The Rev. Augustine Newton, assisted by the Rev. Joel C. Metcalf, of the Winchester Unitarian church, performed the ceremony. The wedding was a quiet one owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's father, only a few intimate friends and relatives being present. Mrs. Margaret Barr, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and Robert Dean of Boston was the best man. The ushers were Warren Appleton Kyle and Lloyd Conley, Brookline; F. Lambert Hunt, Jr., Winchester, and William Eaton, Nashua, N. H. Mr. and Mrs. Barr will live at 12 Wedgemere avenue, Winchester, on their return from their honeymoon.

GERMANS FORCE ALLIES BACK ON DIXMUDE

Paris, Nov. 11.—The French official statement given out in Paris this afternoon says that fighting was resumed yesterday morning with great severity between Nieuport and the Lys. The French forces were successful in maintaining their front, but it is admitted that the Germans, toward the end of the day, were successful in taking possession of Dixmude. The British troops are described as having repulsed the enemy at several points.

At other points on the line the French claim slight progress. The text follows:

"On our left wing the fighting was resumed yesterday morning between Nieuport and the Lys with a very great degree of severity. Generally speaking our front was maintained in spite of the violence and the strength of the German attacks directed against certain of our points of support."

Fighting Very Hot.

"To the north of Nieuport we were even able to recapture Lambertzyde and advance beyond the town, but toward the end of the day the Germans succeeded in taking possession of Dixmude. We still hold our positions in the approaches of this town, along the canal from Nieuport to Ypres, which has been heavily occupied. The fighting was very hot at these places."

"The British troops attacked, also on several points, succeeded everywhere in stopping the enemy."

"On the rest of the front the general situation shows no change, with the exception of slight progress by our forces to the north of Souissons and in the region to the west of Valmy, on the right bank of the Aisne. Outside of these two points the state of the weather permitted only minor engagements which resulted successfully for us. Particularly at Colneourt, three kilometers north of the forest of Parroy, we repulsed a detachment of the enemy."

German Strategy.

It is becoming more and more evident to French observers that Germany is now making a maximum effort in Belgium to carry out her determination to penetrate the battle line of the allies with a frontal attack and reach either Dunkirk or Calais on the English channel.

The foggy weather of the last few days apparently has cleared, and the Germans are pushing the attack. Nevertheless, Paris seems well satisfied with the situation of the allies and the optimism of the past two weeks continues unabated.

"The German position, however, is being given close study. French military critics from the standpoint of strategy regard the German position between two adversaries, too far from each other for united efforts in the same operation, as a favorable one, for the reason that it permits the use of what is called 'internal lines.'"

Recalls Napoleon's Victories

This strategy is simple in theory but not always so in practice. A classical example of internal lines is found in the campaign of 1814 in France. Napoleon, holding the internal lines, beat the Austrian army at one point and then, after leaving sufficient forces before the Austrians to hold them in check, proceeded by forced marches toward the Russian army, which he vanquished in turn. Nowadays railroad transportation makes it possible to apply this maneuver to points 1000 miles apart. German railroads in particular lend themselves admirably to this procedure.

But there is an essential difference it is pointed out today by French observers, between Napoleon's campaign of a century ago and that of William II. The operations of today were not begun in the same manner. The first draft of troops to East Prussia was not sent after a victory in France, but after a German defeat at Tannenberg, and further drafts of troops are now being sent to the eastern arena of the war after German defeats at Augustow and Warsaw.

Thus it is not a question in the opinion of French critics of falling up on the second enemy after having beaten the first, but, rather, of retiring before an enemy in a good position in an endeavor to limit the success of another enemy still better placed than the first, or of the first uniting with the second to beat the ally of the first and then free for a time at least their line of operations in order that they may turn their attention to the second.

Attention to the Russians.

"This line of argument leads to the conclusion in Paris that the German maneuver in Belgium will be pursued with great determination."

London, Nov. 11.—Coincident with the news that every German has been except from Russian soil, comes a dispatch from Petrograd declaring that the Russian army has been ordered to march toward a re-creation of hostilities. It is a selected proposal.

Contrary to the German report that the Russians had been checked in the frontier of East Prussia, Petrograd declares a brilliant success in that region has been succeeded by an actual invasion of German territory. An equal triumph is reported from the other end of the long Russian battle line, with Cossacks raiding close to Cracow, the commandant of which fortress has ordered the civilian population of the city to leave. Presumably again said to be fully invested, and the reduction of this fortress is likely to precede any further advance by the Russian left wing.

Admiral Howard is wholly satisfied with the scope of the victories reported against the Germans, for the better reason in military circles that if the Russian strategy of the National Army had been more fully followed, even to the extent of the surrender of Warsaw, the invaders never would have reached the country with intact fighting organization. Others feel that political motives quite justified the government.

Take Two German Generals

Contrary to practice, infantry and not artillery has been the dominant force used by the Russians along their western battle front in pushing the invaders back across the border. Showing disregard of the German batteries, superior forces of Russian infantry have advanced and have captured the use of cold steel. From Moscow comes a report that during the fighting near Aerod, on the river Warthe, the Russians captured Gen. von Mackenro, commander of the 17th German army corps, together with members of his staff. It is reported that Gen. von Mackenro, who was in command at Lodz when the Germans occupied that city, has been captured by the Russians.

Home reports that the Austrian army is abandoning entirely its positions in western Galicia and will withdraw to the foot of the Carpathians, leaving the war front that has been the stronghold, but the stubborn defense of Przemyśl and the evident determination to defend Cracow hardly a confirmation of this report.

Russia Relies Upon Its Weight of Numbers.

Petrograd, Nov. 11.—The last of dealing with Turkey in the east will in no wise cause a slackening of the pressure being exerted along the German frontier, according to military authorities here today. Everywhere the advance of the Russians into East Prussia and Posen province continues. It is declared here, and the momentum of the enormous forces of the Czar having once been gained it will not be checked, even though a portion of the army should be withdrawn for a movement against the Turks.

It is the confident belief in Petrograd that the great Russian army will crush its way through East Prussia, Galicia and Posen by force of its own weight of numbers. Reports from the front declare it is evident the Kaiser is rushing reinforcements to his eastern front from Belgium. Men of commands reported a week ago to be fighting in Flanders have been taken prisoners in East Prussia, it is declared.

An official statement from the war office declares the German right flank in East Prussia, after stubborn resistance in the region of Lyck, has been pushed back toward the Mazour lakes. Russians have also reached Mielow in an advance toward Cracow. In Galicia they have crossed the Wislok and occupied Rzeszow, Dymow and Lisko.

Reports to the war office declare the Germans are pushing reinforcements toward Thorn and Posen. All railroad lines are given over to the transportation of troops, which are being concentrated in the line of the Russian advance.

American Help Starving Belgians
London, Nov. 11.—An Amsterdam dispatch to Reuters Telegram Company says:

"Dutchmen returning from Antwerp report that the distress there is very great and that the depots of the American committee for the relief of the Belgians are besieged from 8 o'clock in the morning until 2 o'clock the next morning by a multitude of starving Belgians."

"A fire occurred Monday in the railway station at Antwerp, destroying 40 wagons with provisions and fodder."

MARINES MAY HAVE LANDED

Rear Admiral Howard Reports Distribution of Supplies Among 800 Families at Acapulco.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Rear Admiral Howard, commander of the Pacific Fleet, advised the Navy Department yesterday that the cruiser Chattanooga had distributed supplies dispatched by the American Red Cross to relieve famine conditions among 800 needy families at Acapulco, Mex. Admiral Howard's dispatch was interpreted by navy officials as the explanation of reports from Mexico City that American Marines had landed at Acapulco. In all probability the Chattanooga's Marines landed the supplies and supervised their distribution.

FOREST SERVICE

Although there were an unusual number of forest fires on the national forests of Oregon in 1914, this year, the loss of merchantable timber has been relatively small.

The propellers of airplanes such as are used in the present European war may be made of selected ash, which is both strong and light and will not split under vibration of shock, or of built-up layers of spruce with mahogany centers. The framework of the machine, too, is generally made of wood, spruce being much used on account of its straight grain and freedom from hidden defects.

A surprisingly large number of substances, ranging all the way from the condensed fumes of smelters to the steamed milk of creameries, have been tried or suggested as means of preserving wood from decay. Most of them, however, have been found to have little or no value for the purpose. Certain forms of coal-tar creosote and zinc chloride are the most widely used wood preservatives.

It is said that the German invaders of Belgium, whatever else they may have destroyed, have been careful not to injure park trees. The cavalrymen, so a report goes, are forbidden to tie their horses to trees for fear that the animals will gnaw the bark. Germany was the first nation to apply forestry on a large scale, some of the crown forests having been under scientific management for over a hundred years.

PURSUE YEGGMEN

Wolfboro Citizens in Chase of Men Who Broke Into Postoffice and Tried to Blow Safe.

Wolfboro, Nov. 11.—Citizens of Wolfboro, armed with shotguns, rifles and revolvers, today this morning started in chase of two yeggmans who attempted to blow the safe in the postoffice in the Peavey Block in the center of the town.

The men fled along the road which parallels the railroad line to Wolfboro Falls and Sanbornville. The men entered the postoffice by forcing a side window and rifled the drawers of stamps and change. They fired two charges of nitroglycerine, which battered the safe, but did not break the door open.

The explosions aroused the neighborhood. Above the postoffice live R. H. Trickey, cashier of the First National Bank, and Leonard Cook, fireman on the Boston & Maine. As they looked out the yeggmans warned them to pull their heads in.

Cook, who is a hunter, fired at the men with his rifle, but without apparent effect. Then the men fled.

MARE ISLAND NAVY YARD LOWEST BIDDER

Washington, Nov. 11.—Contracts for the six new destroyers will not be let until the bids have been compared in detail with estimates submitted by the Mare Island navy yard, following the practice recently adopted of securing from Government yards estimates of the cost of constructing all vessels for which the department invites private bids. Secretary Daniels received from the Mare Island yard estimates ranging from $826,670 to $874,917 for building one of these destroyers. As these estimates make no allowance for interest on the plant, deterioration, overhead charges or superintendence, it is difficult to reach a proper basis of comparison. The new destroyers will be designated by numbers from 63 to 68 inclusive, and contracts are awarded when they will be assigned names chosen from the list of distinguished American naval officers.

TO BE PEACE OR WAR

Base Ball Magnates to Talk it Over Today.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Leaders of organized baseball and a committee representing the Federal League will meet here tomorrow in a conference to determine whether there is to be peace in the baseball world.

James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, was authority for the statement today that the "peace" advocates will come to a final decision today.

"There is no truth in the rumor," Mr. Gilmore added, "that the Federal League will disappear if a compromise is reached. There will be a Federal League next season, and it will be a major league. Of course, we may have to rearrange our circuit if an agreement is entered into with organized baseball."

Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission and B. H. Johnson, president of the American League, and member of the commission, are to attend the conference as representatives of organized baseball, it was said.

PAVING JOB NEARING THE FINISH.

Should be Completed by the Middle of Next Week.

The paving contractors are making such headway that with good weather they should be able to finish up by the middle of next week. The track crew of the railroad have finished laying the switch at Bartlett street and are now engaged in laying the glider rails to the railroad crossing, and this blocked the way to the car barn, so that all of the local cars were left on Market Square on Wednesday night. This should be finished by tonight and then the cars will be able to resume something like their regular schedule.

His Qualifications

A young Scandinavian recently applied for a job as lifesaver at the municipal baths in Minneapolis. As he would about six feet six inches and very well built, the chief lifesaver gave him an application blank to fill out. "By the way," said the chief lifesaver, "can you swim?"

"No," replied the applicant, "but I can wade like hares."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

MECHANICAL FATIGUE IN A MACHINE-MADE WAR

This is very largely a machine-made war, and it would be a curious and not altogether illogical denouement of the great struggle if its end should be hastened through the fatigue of the machine rather than the exhaustion of the man.

This war is being fought with the gun and the motor-car; and so strenuous and uninterrupted has been the struggle that these have been put to a test of endurance the like of which has never been witnessed in the history of artillery or the brief but very strenuous history of the gasoline car.

The life of the gun, so far as its absolute destruction by bursting is concerned, is practically unlimited; but not so its accuracy-life. Every time a gun is fired some of the interior surface of its bore and delicate rifling is wiped away, and a certain degree of its accuracy is lost. This is true of the shoulder rifle, with its bore so small that it would not much more than admit a lead-pencil, no less than of the great 16-inch siege gun of the Germans. Fortunately for the infantryman, the wearing out of the bore decreases rapidly with a decrease in the size of the bore. Broken, as it is called by the artillerymen, is greatest in the large guns and least in the 0.30 rifle. The big guns which form the main batteries of our warships and are employed in our coast fortifications can fire from 150 to 250 rounds (dependent upon the pressure and heat in the powder chamber) before they begin to lose their accuracy.

No such loss of ballistic qualities is occurring in the German howitzers and siege pieces, however, and this for the reason that the velocity, and therefore the pressure and the heat of explosion in the powder chamber are very much lower in the howitzer than in the direct-fire high-velocity gun. Nevertheless, their heavy, siege pieces, like everything else in the German army, are being worked at top pressure; and already the German artillerymen must be beginning to find that there is a discrepancy between the estimated and the actual point of fall of the high explosive siege-gun shells.—Scientific American.

AFTER INCOME
TAX DODGERSTreasury Department Starts
Campaign to Collect Millions.

Washington, Nov. 11.—Officials of the treasury department are seeking to lay the ground work for a vigorous and nation-wide campaign for the detection of income tax dodgers and the collection of unpaid taxes, which some authorities believe may amount into the millions. The effort is directed particularly against stockholders and drawers of dividends from the corporations of the country.

There are more than 300,000 corporations doing business in the United States, according to returns from the corporation excise tax and if any plan is adopted to institute a thorough search of their lists of shareholders, and the records of their dividends, it will be most exhaustive and may take years. For the present, no such plan is likely to be adopted, however, and officials hope that the corporations will furnish this information upon request.

There is some question as to the power of the department to make corporations furnish this information, but it has been an unofficial view in case of refusal the law give sufficient authority of sending revenue agents to make examinations. Since the first returns from the income taxes were tallied there has been no concealment of the fact that treasury officials were disappointed.

"DUOFOLD"—Ideal Underwear.

Dr. Alfred Wallon, the eminent physician and surgeon, says: "The ideal undergarment would be a thin, absorbent fabric next the skin, then a layer of air, and then a woolen fabric to turn the cold—on the same principle as the fur on an animal—a thin fabric drying quickly with the heat of the body driving the moisture through to the wool."

This is the principle of Duofold underwear. We sell it.

PIANO TALKS

WHAT IS AN OPTIMIST?

"A man who, falling from a fourth-story window, is heard to murmur as he passes the first floor, 'All right so far.' This reminds us of the devoted individuals who purchase cheap pianos. They think because the instrument looks bright and shiny and seems to 'work' pretty well for the first six months or so that it is 'all right.' They don't realize that the life of a good piano is measured by years, almost a life time, in fact.
